WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 7.

AN ENTRAORDINARY CAREER.-A Chicago letter says:-"This afternoon a well-known grain-broker attempted to put a sensational end to a checkered life. This was M. Charles de lielloy, who claims the title (to which he is indeed entitled) of Marquis de Belloy. Originally heir to an estate of nearly $2,000,000 francs, he contrived to dissipate three-fourths of his fortune in Paris and Europe. With the remainder (something less than $100,000) he came to America accompanying a well-to-do and tashionable New York family whose acquaintance he had made in Paris, to your city. There his $100,000 was soon diminished by feur-fifths, and he went on to Utica, whence after a brief stay, he removed to Michigan. He spent one winter in the backwoods, hunting and lishing, varying the monotony of forest life by making love to a handsome and cultured lady of Detroit. Thence he came to Chicago, found the excitement he craved, engaged in grain speculation, and was soon satisfactorily backrupted. "At this juncture the death of a relative brought him into a fortune of $80,000, and for awhile de Belley was himself again, till No. 2 spring' swallowed up almost every deliar of the windfall. With the remnant he returned to Michigan, wooed and wedded his sweetheart and set up a country grocerv. This kept him occupied for six years, curing which time four children were born to him. Then he became a bankrupt again, and taught music and lectured on spiritualism for awhile, till he fell into a third fortune of some $50,000, which went in grain speculations Eke the others. Reduced again to ebb-tide he energed with Mr. N. K. Fairbank as a day laborer at $10.50 a week. Mr. Fairbank had met him years before in Utica, and knowing him to be as honorable as ever any nobleman was in a play, set him up as a broker with $4,-This went in the great wheat corner of inst August. Since then M. de Belloy has been living on scanty remittances from France, and seemed to have lost all heart and hope. Marty this week he offered to bet $50 that he would be dead before May day, and the same evening drew a pistol at Wolford's restaurant and tried to shoot himself, but was prevented from accomplishing his purpose. This even ing, in company with two friends, he entered a miles-beer saleon, sat down at a table, ordered some near, then rose suddenly, and drawing a small revolver from his pocket placed the muzale against his forehead and fired. He fell to the floor, then rose, walked (his face covered with blood) to the counter, where he shock leands with the proprietor and apologized for the inconvenience he had caused, then fell, and was carried home. The first impression was that the builet was in the brain and that the
